

Getting Started

Making Your Way

A Reception and Placement Orientation Curriculum

This brief guide provides information on how to use Making Your Way to enhance orientation provision to refugees.

- 1 Conduct a needs assessment to find out what topics refugees need to know and what they want to learn more about in orientation.
 - ⇒ Choose one of the three needs assessments from Making Your Way.

- 2 Identify what you already do or need to provide during orientation. You may have handouts, a lesson plan from a curriculum, or guest speakers. You may be looking for new resources.

- 3 Select activity plans from *Making Your Way to use when delivering orientation. You can do this by:
 - ⇒ Checking out The Basics activity plans in Making Your Way. There is a Basics activity plan at the beginning of each unit summarizing that unit's main messages.
 - ⇒ Taking a look at the Objective and Indicators chart in Making Your Way (Appendix A) and selecting activity plans for the objectives and indicators you are not covering.

- 4 Prepare for and deliver orientation.
 - ⇒ Prepare materials for selected lesson plans and ensure that interpretation is arranged, if needed.
 - ⇒ Repeat and review important information throughout orientation.
 - ⇒ Reinforce main messages when refugees are being transported or are waiting for appointments, using pictures and cards from Making Your Way.

- 5 Check for participant understanding by:
 - ⇒ Asking clients the Debriefing Questions at the end of each activity plan in Making Your Way.
 - ⇒ Conducting a learner assessment, such as the Model R&P CO Assessment.

- 6 Use participant feedback and assessments to identify areas of orientation to strengthen.

Tips

Pressed for time?

- ⇒ Use The Basics activity plans to cover basic information about the topic. Each unit starts with a Basics activity plan that on average takes less than 30 minutes.
- ⇒ Shorten activities by using fewer cards or pictures, or by removing sections of the activity plan.

Are people not grasping main concepts?

- ⇒ Select activity plans based on what participants need and want to know more about. Adults learn better when they are interested in what is being taught.
- ⇒ Refer to the Main Messages section at the top of each activity plan to review main messages with participants.

Want to make orientation more fun?

- ⇒ Use the easy-to-follow activity plans to get participants actively involved in their learning. When participants are engaged, they learn and remember information better than if they were listening to a lecture.

Transportation

The Basics: Transportation

Introduction for the Trainer

Key Content

During this session, participants will learn about the types of transportation available to them in their new community.

Main Messages

There are different types of transportation available to refugees to help them get around their new community. Refugees will need to know how to safely board, ride, and exit the types of transportation they use. They should also know how to safely walk around their neighborhood. The trainer should stress that there are laws in the United States that regulate walking, biking, and driving a car. Participants should be reminded that using safety belts is the law. Participants should be encouraged to use public transportation, where it is available, since car expenses are high.

Providing orientation to only one person?

- ⇒ Each activity plan includes directions on how to fit the plan to the number of participants receiving orientation (see an example of this to the right).

Working With Individuals or Very Small Groups

When working with one to three participants, hang the Basics of Transportation Signs on the wall or spread them out on a table or the floor. Spread the Basics of Transportation Cards out on a table or the floor. Together, participants complete the sequences by placing them near the Basics of Transportation Signs (with tape, if they are on the wall).
